The Brand Voice Starter Kit

Five quick exercises to find the words that actually sound like you — not everyone else.

Grab a pen. This is a workbook, not a read-through — get the good stuff out of your head and onto the page.

Clarity first. Trust always. Growth follows.

Three words

If a client who loves working with you had to describe your business in three words, what would they be? Not your tagline. Not your About page. The real words — the ones that would make you nod and say, "yes, that's exactly it."

Try this

Ask a client, or a friend who's been on the other side of your work. Their words are often better than yours.

• EXERCISE TWO

Always / never

Every strong voice has edges. It knows what it sounds like — and just as importantly, what it doesn't.

I always sound...

I never sound...

See the difference in action

OKAY

"We provide high-quality services tailored to your needs."

GREAT

"We build marketing systems that sound like you — not everyone else."

Same message, different voice. Now try rewriting one line of your own copy above.

• EXERCISE THREE

Your word bank

Some words are yours. Others just aren't — even if everyone else in your industry uses them. Build your list.

Words I use

Words I avoid

Try this

Look through your last five client testimonials or reviews. Circle the words they used to describe you — that's often your realest word bank.

• EXERCISE FOUR

One message, three ways

The one thing I want every person to walk away understanding about my business is:

Now say it three ways.

● Website

● Email

● Social

• EXERCISE FIVE

Where's the gap?

A quick gut-check. Answer honestly — this is for you, not for show.

- ☐ My website sounds like the same words I'd use out loud.
- ☐ I could send my last three posts to a stranger and they'd sound like one business.
- ☐ I don't cringe rereading my own bio.
- ☐ My marketing sounds like me on a good day — not a generic industry voice.

Mostly unchecked

You don't need another hack. You need a system — one built around your actual voice. That's exactly what the Brand MAGIC Method does.

Mostly checked

You're closer than you think. Let's tighten what you've got into something repeatable, so it works without you starting from scratch every time.

You just wrote the first draft of your brand voice.

That's not nothing — that's the start of a system. One that sounds like you on your best day, every day, without you having to reinvent it each time you sit down to write.
